Happy March!!! Happy better weather!! I can't believe we had to turn our heater on. Ugh! Not a fan of that ... get it? Not a fan ... anyway, moving right along.

I am super excited about spring and mostly about Farmer's Market! Good times, food and people right there! Not only is Farmer's Market happening, Tybee's St. Patrick's parade is happening too, and that is just cool seeing everything get back on track! Let's keep our fingers crossed, our butts shaking and our beads green!

The Traveling BC never fails to delight and this month is no exception! This one is from John and Jamie Dowell and has a great story to it. It was taken on the Gulf and is called the Cape Romano Dome House and is located on Caxambas Island.

John & Jamie went to visit his niece and her husband. Beautiful waters & shells on the gulf side near Naples, Florida. The dome house was built in 1980 on the beach and from 1987 until the early 90s, it was the family's primary residence. It was abandoned in 1992 and in September 2017 Hurricane Irma sunk two of the six domes! There is some history there! Thank you to John and Jamie and we will see you at A-J's!!

Everyone have an amazing spring and happy reading! Now, make me a drink and turn the page...

Tybee Lazaretto Day

By Jim Hilleary

Did You Know?

On April 21, 1767, the English vessel Constantine set sail from Bristol, England, on its way to acquire 275 kidnapped Africans located on the western coast of Africa. This was the second of 14 journeys that the Constantine would make over the next 30 years, delivering over 3,000 slaves to ports in North America and the Caribbean. Captain Thomas Gullan led the crew of 35 men that would transport the subjugated Africans across the Atlantic towards their final destination of Savannah, Georgia.

Gullan was an experienced captain who, over the course of his sailing career, was responsible for bringing nearly 2,800 Africans into bondage in the Americas. It would take several months for the captain and crew to make the journey to the coast of Africa and then acquire the large number of enslaved Africans to bring across the Atlantic. The trip was horrific beyond imagination for the Africans aboard the Constantine. They were stripped, shaved of all body hair, and then tightly packed into the dark confined cargo hold of the ship where they were chained and held in place for the duration of voyage across the ocean, which typically took 6 to 12 weeks. Those who survived this harrowing journey made land at Tybee Island in late May of 1768.

In 1767, the colony of Georgia approved an Act empowering local commissioners to purchase 104 acres of land on the northwest corner of Tybee Island from Josiah Tatnall, for the purpose of building a Lazaretto on the land to support the burgeoning slave trade in Georgia, which had recently been legalized. Lazaretto is an Italian word which came to mean quarantine station around the world as sea travel and trade became more and more common. This first Lazaretto was built in 1768 and would serve the Georgian slave trade until 1785 when it fell into disrepair and a second quarantine station was built on Cockspur Island. While we do not know the exact location of the buildings for the quarantine station and its accompanying graveyard, we know it was located somewhere on the northwest corner of the island along Lazaretto Creek, where Tybee Marina, North Island Surf & Kayak, Bubba Gumbo's, Coco's, Captain Mike's, Tybee Jet Ski & Kayak, and Captain Derek's are now located.

When the Constantine arrived at Tybee in May of 1768, the crew and the enslaved Africans who survived the journey were required to stay at the Lazaretto until they were cleared to be healthy enough to enter Savannah. Those Africans who did not survive the trip were buried in the graveyard on Tybee. On June 1, 1768, Captain Gullan delivered 250 enslaved Africans to the port of Savannah to be sold into slavery. According to the historically documented trans-Atlantic slave database, between the years of 1766 – 1803, approximately 14,000 enslaved Africans were brought into Savannah. And nearly all of those first set foot on either Tybee Island or Cockspur Island before being brought into port. This means that for many Black Americans alive today, Tybee Island was the first place their ancestors set foot in North America. For this reason, it is of critical importance that we tell the story of Tybee Island's role in the trans-Atlantic slave trade.

The Tybee MLK group will be hosting Tybee Lazaretto Day at 3:00pm on Friday, March 25, 2022 at Battery Park. Tybee Lazaretto Day will be a commemoration of enslaved African ancestors who were brought to Tybee Lazaretto via the trans-Atlantic slave trade and will bring awareness to the cultural significance of the Lazaretto and the work being done towards creating the Lazaretto Healing Memorial. This is in conjunction with United Nations International Day of Remembrance of the legacy of slavery and the trans-Atlantic slave trade, which is held every year on March 25.

Battery Park on Tybee is located across from the turn to The Crab Shack on Highway 80. We hope to see you there for this historical event.

Spring is on the way dear! I don't know about you, but I am more than ready for warmer weather to come our way. We have several exciting things coming up that you don't want to miss, including the annual Tybee Island Irish Heritage Celebration Parade on March 12th, and the St. Patrick's Day shenanigans in Savannah. Also, don't forget that we spring forward on March 13th, leaving more daylight for all things that make Tybee so unique.

As the weather begins to warm up, we can expect to see some new faces around, and also those who have continuously visited us over the years. Let's welcome them with open arms and show them the best that Tybee has to offer, making their time on Tybee the best yet! There are so many great places to dine, shop and experience here, so hop on your bike and explore.

While we're gearing up for busier times, here is a quick recap of the beach rules. No glass, motorized vehicles or furry friends are allowed on the beach (with the exception of trained and certified service animals). Steer clear of the dunes and please don't jump off the Pier! If you're looking for a camping experience, do not pitch a tent on the beach... visit Rivers End Campground instead! Lifeguards are here for you, make sure not to swim out too far and listen for their signals and alerts. Fishing is allowed, but only in designated areas; however, please do not lure sharks to the beach! Sharks and other sport fishing can be done with one of our fabulous charter companies on the island, call them! Last but certainly not least, leave only your footprints on the beach. Dispose of all trash, remove all structures, fill in holes and deconstruct those sandcastles.

Attention Tybee Business Owners! Main Street Tybee is excited to start hosting quarterly Main Street Meet Up events to allow for networking and to educate business owners about what Main Street can do for local businesses. Grab your business neighbor and drop by TS Chu's on March 8th from 4pm-6pm for our first meeting. We hope to see you there!

The Development Authority/Main Street Program is hard at work planning the annual goals and projects to complete for 2022! If you are interested in learning more about the Tybee Island Main Street Program or the Development Authority, don't hesitate to give me a shout! I can be reached at cassidi.kendrick@cityoftybee.org or at 912-472-5103.

BURNT POT ISLAND

By Karen Dove Barr

A few weeks ago, the Savannah Morning News did a write-up on a new historical fiction book by Karen Dove Barr called "Burnt Pot Island." I was slightly skeptical because I have read two historical fictions lately and I wasn't sure I was ready for another one, since I hated the last one that I read. The first one was about Savannah in 1838 and the sinking of the steamship Pulaski. I loved that book! The second one I read was about the Great Depression in 1934 Texas and California. It was the most depressing book I have ever read and it wore me out! But "Burnt Pot Island" spurred my interest because it takes place, not only in Savannah, but areas around Savannah that I am very familiar with.

My family and I moved to Savannah from Florida when I was one-year-old, so it's the only place I really know. The most prominent places in the book are Skidaway Island, Sandfly, Isle of Hope, Bethesda and especially Pin Point. I grew up in southside Savannah and have fond memories of crabbing, fishing and hanging out with friends on Isle of Hope and I even went to school with two boys who were raised at Bethesda Home for Boys. I also remember when they built the bridge to Skidaway Island when I was in high school.

But the most prominent place in the book is Pin Point, which I knew very little about other than it was a black community and the birthplace of Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas. Howard and I took a road trip to check out the area and it's just before the bridge to Skidaway Island and it even has a museum in the old oyster factory. It's a beautiful area with some beautiful houses, but just enough overgrown structures in ruins that you can picture the area in the early 1900's. Well, enough about the history, let's hear about the fiction!

The story centers around mother Catherine and daughter Licia and begins in 1922 when Catherine needs to get Licia somewhere safe because her boss man, Mr. Scarlotti (owner of Scarlotti Oyster Factory on Pin Point) has set his sights on 13-year-old Licia because she is so light skinned that she could pass for white.

Catherine's two oldest boys live in a cabin on Burnt Pot Island (somewhere off of Skidaway Island) while running moonshine for the sheriff and the mayor of Savannah, after all it is the Prohibition. Catherine sends Licia off to Burnt Pot Island where she's safe with her brothers, and eventually Licia gets into the moonshine business as well. But, all Licia wants is to finish school and move to Savannah where she can have a different life than her mother has had to endure.

We then go back to 1904 when Catherine was a 15-year-old girl and we learn all about how women had to work to make a living and also why Licia is in danger from Mr. Scarlotti. It's not a great way to live, but slavery is over and they are free. Eventually, back in 1922, the mayor of Savannah has taken a liking to Licia and he decides that he's going to build her a cabin on Burnt Pot and take care of her and all she has to do is obey his every command. He's married, so his cabin on Burnt Pot is his home away from the wife whenever he sees fit. Licia is just happy to be taken care of, but she still wants desperately to move to the city. But, after the mayor takes her on a trip to Atlanta, she sees a whole other world that she is determined to get to.

I loved this book and all of the characters (except that pervert Mr. Scarlotti), especially Catherine and Licia. They are strong, determined women who will do anything for their families, even in the worst of times. I learned a lot about the history of the islands that I didn't know and I could picture what it was like to live back then, as hard as it was. I also wondered how the Depression affected the people of Pin Point when it started in 1929 and decided that they were probably pretty self-sufficient. But that would be another book.

Anyway, I give this book 5 roses and then some. Karen Dove Barr is an attorney who is a Savannah native and has lived on Skidaway Island since 1989. "Burnt Pot Island" is her first novel and I couldn't be more pleased to pass it on to you.

Hope the year is treating you well and hope you have a great St. Patrick's Day. Erin go brag! Until next time....

BEHIND THE TAPE

By Lt. Emory Randolph

Hey everybody. My name is Emory Randolph, and I've been an animal lover for as long as I can remember. In fact, I was the kid that took a puppy out of a box marked "Free to Good Home" and managed to convince my parents that she was a stray that followed me back to the house. As I got older, Mom and Dad were sure that I would become a zoo keeper or veterinarian. Imagine their surprise when I followed my older brother's footsteps into a career in law enforcement!

After eighteen years on the job, I had achieved almost every goal I'd set for myself, except for one. I never had the opportunity to become a dog handler. Then, in January of 2020, I caught wind of a program in Nebraska that allowed shelter dogs to join officers on patrol in order to increase their chances for adoption. It was absolutely crazy. It went against everything the public believed about police officers... and there was no reason we couldn't bring an even better version of it to Georgia! A couple of weeks later, the Tybee Island Police Department's "K9 for a Day" partnership with the Humane Society for Greater Savannah was born. To say I was nervous about the success of the program is an understatement, but when the first five dogs were adopted almost immediately, I knew our friends and neighbors were on board!

The sixth dog was different. When I walked in to the Humane Society that Thursday morning, the staff was waiting for me with a solid black German Shepherd named Rocky. They told me that this dog was special. So special, they said, that the police department was going to adopt him. I told them the Chief would never go for it. After promising that I'd do what I could, but insisting that they shouldn't get their hopes up, Rocky and I set off on our adventure. Like most shelter dogs, Rocky was shy at first. As we drove toward the island with the windows down, I told him that I was going to do everything in my power to find him a loving home. As we crossed the Bull River Bridge, Rocky's eyes lit up and his nose took in deep whiffs of salt air. It was clear that there was something about the island atmosphere that felt like home.

As we walked into the police department, Rocky suddenly bolted and ran ahead of me, disappearing around the corner into the break room and out of sight. A moment later, I could hear the Chief's voice talking to this dog, and I just knew that I was about to get the butt chewing of a lifetime for allowing a dog to run free in the building. What I saw instead, was Chief sitting at the dinner table with Rocky in his lap, licking his face aggressively. That's when Chief stopped laughing long enough to address me by saying, "Let me guess. You want us to adopt this dog." I assured him that wasn't the case. It was the Humane Society that wanted us to adopt the dog. "Tell them it's done. We want him." I asked Chief if he was serious, to which he assured me he was. From that moment on, Rocky was an animal ambassador for the Tybee Island Police Department... and my best friend.

Since then, Rocky and I have made appearances at animal adoption events, day camps, church services, nursing homes and Christmas parties. Every time we step out into public, you welcome us with love, support and open arms. Thank you for making us feel like an important part of the community and we look forward to seeing each and every one of you soon!

SPORTS TEASER

By George Hassell

Welcome to March Sports Teaser fans! Before the madness of basketball and the boys of summer hopefully get ready to play ball, we have quite a bit of football to wrap up. And let's not forget Saint Patrick's Day is just around the corner and looks like we'll be having a wide-open celebration for the first time in three years, finally, on Tybee and in Savannah. Grab your green beer and let's talk some sports.

You would think I would start talking about the Super Bowl but I'm going to once again mention that I, along with thousands of other fans, am still reveling in the Georgia national championship win over Alabama for their first football championship in 41 years. I'll probably mention that in every article going forward, so get used to it! Would you expect anything less from this hack columnist? OK, enough of that, but GO DOGS!!

How about that Super Bowl game? Just like the playoffs, the Super Bowl lived up to the hype and offered a very attractive matchup, along with a pretty darn entertaining game. The Los Angeles Rams won their first Super Bowl since moving back to Los Angeles from Saint Louis, by beating the Cincinnati Bengals 23-20. I know a certain group of people at The Sandbar were disappointed, but they can hold their heads high, as the Bengals and Joe Burrow look to be here to stay. But the night was for the superstars that the Rams brought in with their win now attitude. Their arsenal included Matt Stafford from UGA and the Detroit Lions, Von Miller from the Denver Broncos and a few others, along with Super Bowl MVP Cooper Kupp at wide receiver. The Rams pushed all their chips in with a ton of money and a lot of swagger, and it paid off with a Super Bowl championship. It also was the 2nd year that the winner of the Super Bowl played in their home stadium, with Tampa Bay and Tom Brady winning last year. The defenses both played well in a fairly low scoring game for the most part, but the Rams put together a 16-play drive to win the game at the end and Aaron Donald got to Burrow on 4th down at midfield to seal the victory. Many locals were certainly rooting for the Rams with the three prominent Bulldog players on the team: Matt Stafford, Sony Michel and Leonard Floyd. These NFL playoffs were very entertaining, and many went right down to the wire, and you could not ask for much more than that.

I'm already looking forward to Labor Day for when Georgia plays Oregon at Mercedes-Benz Stadium in Atlanta and football will be back. It's hard to say goodbye, but we must press on and embrace the other sports that are currently going on and upcoming.

The Winter Olympics came and went with not a whole lot of people noticing it, to be honest with you. The fact that it's 12 hours away and you didn't know what was on and what was live and that that the Summer Olympics were just last year, seemed to turn off a lot of people.

College basketball is about to enter March Madness and it looks like Auburn and Gonzaga and maybe Kentucky stand out above the rest. I guess we better pay a little more attention before we fill out our brackets in the March madness pools coming up.

Hopefully, we will be having Major League Baseball on time, but as of this writing, the players are still in a lockout. We'll do a little more baseball in the April column.

Golf has finished the West Coast swing and now has moved to Florida with the Masters and pimento cheese lurking in April. See y'all then!

Irish Blessings

By Margie McLellan

Tybee's favorite holiday is here! Finally, after two years, we get to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. I'm sure most of us will be out and about in our green, watching our St. Patrick's Heritage Parade. So, in the spirit of the Irish, I'm regaling you with some good ol' Irish Blessings:

May the saddest day of the future
Be no worse than the happiest day of your past.

May good luck be your friend
In whatever you do.
And may trouble be always
A stranger to you.

May your neighbors respect you,
Troubles neglect you,
The angels protect you,
And Heaven accept you.

May you live as long as you want,
And never want as long as you live.

May the roof above us never fall in,
And may we friends gathered below never fall out.

May you have the hindsight to know where you've been,
The foresight to know where you're going,
And the insight to know when you're going too far.

Wherever you go and whatever you do,
May the luck of the Irish be there with you.

May Irish eyes smile upon you. Happy St. Patrick's Day!

LOVE, NOT ACTUALLY

A Love Advice Column by a Boy and a Girl Who Should Not Be Giving Love Advice. Ever.

The question this month is: I want to ask my girlfriend to marry me. What is a unique way to pop the question?

Boy's Advice

So, you think she's the "one," do ya? Before you pop the question, you first need to ask yourself, if this relationship is so perfect, why the hell do I want to screw it all up and get the government involved? You see, when the government gets involved in anything, it goes to shit. IMHO, marriage is an antiquated patriarchal system used to rule and control the middle and lower classes. Go to school, get a "job," get married, raise a family, pay taxes, and die, leaving your children to rinse and repeat as slaves to the government. Hell, THEY work for YOU, so why is it that YOU have to get permission from THEM to get "married"?

If you've decided this is the route you want to take, have you factored in the cost of the wedding? The average cost of a wedding in 2019 was a whopping $28,000.00. This doesn't include the sacrifices your friends and family have to make, like buying bridesmaid dresses, renting tuxes, throwing bachelor/bachelorette parties, travel, hotels, gifts, wedding showers, and the like. All that money that would be much better spent putting a down payment on a house, or simply starting your new married life with a little nest egg.

I could rant about this stupid decision of yours for hours, but you say you're ready to pop the question and nothing is going to change your mind. All you have to do is get your best friend to set up a beautiful breakfast on the beach for you. Walk your partner down to the beach to watch the sunrise and when she sees what you've had set up for her, she can't say no. As the sun rises and you're sharing mimosas and bagels (cause your friend can't cook), turn to your partner and tell them that they are the most beautiful, loving, caring, smart, wonderful person that you've ever met. Tell her that you can't imagine spending the rest of your life without her. Then, get on one knee, pull out the box with the ring inside from Jerrod's, and ask her if she would do you the honor of being your wife. Just keep in mind the real reason a bride smiles from ear to ear as she's walking down the wedding aisle, it's because she knows that she's given her last BJ!

Girl's Advice

OMG!!! Boy has clearly gone off the deep end with this whole government conspiracy situation. If you are a devout reader, and you should be, you will have read his mad-faced-drool-ranting before about this exact situation. After eye-rolling through that excessive response to a simple question, here is what you do and I've got a couple ideas here.

If you are both responsible for a fur baby, you take said fur baby to the beach and you spell out "Will you marry me?" with their paw prints in the sand and have them dressed up and sitting cutely nearby. If you have children together, substitute the fur baby for the kid. If you have neither fur baby nor baby baby together, use your own feet. I'm already gonna say 'YES'! Unless it's your feet and you didn't get a pedicure.

Every time an M. Knight Shyamalan movie crops up, I'm one foot in and one foot out. Back in the days of Sixth Sense, Signs, and Unbreakable (the good old days), this guy was The Director!! Now, it's more of an ew, head shaking situation. However, I rallied and I felt responsible for my constituency of hard-core readers who seriously L and D for my every word. Before I committed my hard-earned dollars for any of it, I watched the trailer. I probably could have written the review based on the trailer, but here I am and here we are.

We start off with Mom and Dad, their daughter, who is ten years old, and their son, who is six. They are on vacation and their hotel directs them to this private beach situation (I'm seriously never trusting anyone ever again) that is all fab and whatever. The hotel drops them off and there are a couple other people hanging out there doing their thing and then it all just gets funky and disjointed. Like M. Knight had the grip of a brilliant idea and then, like sands through the hour glass, so go the days of all of our lives.

Everyone kind of lost their shit and it all got super weird super quick. The mom had this watermelon sized tumor plucked out of her body, of what initially appeared like a lemon sized scene, and then wounds were instantly healed. The youngsters gained 20 years in a day and then the six-year-old boy impregnated the other girl and gave birth and ugh and eww. Oh, and then the end! Total M. Knight scene, but really out in the clouds this time. I had a full-on flashback of the 2011 flick of Last Cabin in the Woods. Just no to the whole thing. However...

I will grudgingly part with one bottle of Jameson, because the idea is just flat out fab brilliant. I'm gonna also throw out one bottle of Jim Beam, because that English actor was really good looking and I was having a minute trying to figure out who he was, and then three bottles of Old Crow, because I've lost two hours of my life that I can never get back. Ever.

A Wee Bit of Blarney

By Margie McLellan

March is one of my favorite months of the year. It signals the end of winter (of course, I don't think us Southerners really understand the concept of "winter") and the days start getting longer and warmer. You can always tell when spring arrives because the island starts to become busy and people are enjoying being outside. My back porch becomes my living room. I practically live out there.

But I guess my favorite thing about March is St. Patrick's Day. Until I moved here, it was just another day in the year. I quickly learned, however, that it is a much beloved holiday here. Parties, parades, shamrocks, beads, leprechauns, the wearing o' the green, more parties, more parades... It got me interested in the history of this holiday. So I did a wee bit of studying on the subject.

St. Patrick is known as the patron saint of Ireland. But did you know that he was not born in Ireland? He was born in Britain and as a young boy was kidnapped and sold into slavery in Ireland. He was there for six years before he was able to escape and return to Britain. From there he went to France and joined a monastery where he spent 12 years. When he became a bishop he dreamed that the Irish people were calling him back. He returned to Ireland where he spent the rest of his life helping the Irish people. He was much beloved by the Irish until his death, which is March 17th.

There are also many popular legends associated with St. Patrick. The symbol of the shamrock comes from the story of St. Patrick using the shamrock to illustrate the Holy Trinity. Another legend has it that St. Patrick banished all the snakes from Ireland by chasing them into the ocean. Then there are leprechauns, the little wee people, who if you are lucky enough to catch, you get their gold. Then there's the kissing of the Blarney Stone, which gives the gift of eloquence. Then there's parades, kilts, bagpipes, beer, beads, and blessings.

All in all, this is truly a great holiday to celebrate with friends and family. So get out your beads, put on your green and join in the fun. It all begins on Tybee the weekend before, with our Tybee Island Heritage Parade on the 12th, starting at 3pm, which I must say is a pretty good one! We do love parades and a reason to party on Tybee Island!

CHAPTER 54 – KILL 'EM ALL AND LET GOD SORT 'EM OUT

DAY 11.5

Cheryl shakes her head. “Boy, oh, boy. Sarah is pissed at you, Tony.”
“I know. That’s just going to have to resolve on its own. We have bigger problems on our hands... like a psycho cop who thinks zombies are people and has got it out for us. Crabber Brian also just led a hundred strong zombie army to attack us at our home. Oh yeah! And we’ve got super zombies who seem to move with superhuman strength and can communicate with the stupid zombies.”

“What if, and just hear me out,” Becky says. “What if the stupid zombies were all the smarter people when they were alive, and all the super zombies were all the dumb asses on the island?”

“HA!” Patch laughs, “You know that makes a sick kind of sense.”

Travis huffs, “I don’t know about you, but I want my island back. I think we should organize hunting parties to eradicate all the damned zombies.”

“Come on man. Whatever happened to giving peace a chance?” Rudy giggles. “I’m just kidding. You guys figure this out and I’m going into the kitchen to see if Sarah has any of those ‘special’ cookies that I’ve been requesting.”

“No shit?” Travis stands up with him. “Special’ cookies? I’m down.” He and Rudy high five and head to the kitchen together.

Tony looks at Doug. “Hey, man. Can you go relieve Joey on the tank for overwatch please? He’s been out there for a while and you can only stare into that thermal sight for so long before your eyes start playing tricks on you.”

“No problem. Just keep me in the loop with this conversation.”

“No worries, brother. In fact,” he says, and reaches behind him, “take the walkie-talkie with you and listen in. Just talk through the tank radio if you have input.”

Doug grabs the radio from Tony and moves toward the door. “Also, if you guys could send a couple of those ‘special’ cookies my way, that’d be great.”

“NO WEED ON OVERWATCH DOUG!” Tony says sternly. “Now go on and get, ya metal head. Johnny will be down to relieve you in a couple hours.”

“I play video games for hours while eating ‘special’ cookies and I’m pretty damn good at Cross Out,” Doug mumbles as he’s walking away.

Patch clears his throat, “So how are we planning to handle all these new developments?”

Johnny looks up. “I think that the next time we run into Brian or Richie we should shoot first and ask questions later.”

“Okay,” Tony says. “That’s one for Team Sara.”

“I’m kind of on Team Sara as well,” Becky says. “Brian has been nothing but a pain in our asses since... since... Hell, since we’ve met him.”

Tony turns to Becky, “So, if your theory is right, if Brian becomes a zombie, he’s gonna turn into a super zombie because he was a dumb ass while he was alive.”

“Perhaps, but I doubt it. Brian is a pain in the ass for sure, but he’s not stupid. I mean, he tried to take us down using a horde of zombies as his attack weapons.”

“Good point,” Patch says, and nods at Becky.

“Brian is probably our biggest threat,” Becky says. “He’s actively trying to get us killed.”

“RICHIE IS OUR BIGGEST THREAT AND WE NEED TO KILL THAT ASSHOLE!” Sara shouts from the kitchen.

“I’M WITH YOU SIS,” Cheryl shouts back at her. She points to the kitchen and lowers her voice. “I’m gonna go in there and talk to her. See if I can calm her down a bit.”

Johnny watches her go then turns back to the table. “They’re not wrong, Tony. Those two are both smart, and capable, and human. They are our biggest threat.”

“Who’s the biggest threat?” Joey asks as he walks in the room fresh off overwatch duty.

“They think Crabber Brian and Richie are the biggest threats we’re facing, and we should hunt them down and kill them.”

“What?” Joey scoffs. “Did you guys not see those two super zeeks? Those things are super-human and super smart... and they control the other zombies!”

Patch takes a deep breath, “Before we left Key West there was an incident where one of our guys was out on a supply run/recon mission and reported seeing a particular zombie who was sort of directing all the other zombies around him. From what we could make out from the radio transmissions, it seemed that this one zombie could also run faster, jump higher, and was stronger than all the other zombies. We just thought this guy was losing his shit and kind of wrote it off. I’m starting to think differently.”

“See!” Joey exclaims. “We need to get rid of the super zeeks first!”

“So,” Tony asks, “super zeeks need immediate attention, especially since they know where we’re at. Brian is actively trying to take us down. Can we all be in agreement that Richie is the smallest immediate threat?”

“NO WE ARE NOT!” Sara shouts from the kitchen.

“Sara is really pissed at you dude,” Becky says.

“YOU’RE DAMNED RIGHT I AM!”

“Sara,” they barely hear Cheryl say in the kitchen. “What did we just talk about?”

Tony rolls his eyes. “Look, let’s try to take the emotion out of this and think logically. We know that right now, we have five major threats.”

“Five?” Joey asks.

“Yes,” Tony answers. “Crabber Brian, who is actively trying to kill us. Richie, the psycho cop, who may or may not be a serial killer, zombies, who want to eat our brains and have us join their ranks, super zombies, who can actually control the other zombies and are faster and stronger than us, and finally, the government, who is inexplicitly bombing entire populations of people.” He takes a breath, “The government isn’t an immediate local threat, but in the end, I think they will be our biggest one.”

“Since we know that these so called ‘super zombies’ actually exist, we should probably keep them at the top of the list of things to take care of immediately," Patch says. "These things really scare me."

"Me too," Tony says.

"Me three!" Joey exclaims. "I can handle idiots like Crabber Brian and Richie, but super zeeks are a whole other story. I saw one jump probably twenty-five feet into a tree from the ground."

"So," Tony begins, "our first priority should be finding and killing the super zeeks. If we happen to see Crabber Brian or Richie... we shoot on sight."

"SOUNDS GOOD TO ME!" Sara shouts through the kitchen door.

The radio crackles to life and Doug's voice sounds out in the room, "Kill 'em all and let God sort 'em out."

"As much as I hate to say it," Joey sighs, "I think Doug is spot on. It's not murder if they're actively trying to threaten or kill us... right?"

"At this point Joey, in my mind they're already dead," Tony says.

"You got that right, Tony!" Sara says as she comes out of the kitchen.

"So, what's the plan, then?" Patch asks.

"That, kind sir, is what we're going to have to figure out tonight.

Tomorrow we go on the offensive."

Beach Walks with Dr. Joe

By Dr. Joe Richardson

MARCH WINDS AND SEA FOAM

We've known since we were kids that March can be windy, so we are probably going to see some breezy days when the wind is blowing onto the beach from offshore. On these days, we are likely to notice sea foam accumulating on the beach. When it happens, I often get asked about all that foam, where it comes from, and what causes it. It's something a Tybee beachcomber is likely to see this time of the year, so I thought I'd write about it this month.

First though, it's important to know what it isn't. People often assume that sea foam is due to polluted inshore water. But sea foam, like we see, is not due to pollution. You've probably seen pictures of polluted waters where detergents or foam-producing substances have spilled into an area causing suds, bubbles and foam. But that is not the case or reason for our beach sea foam.

Our shoreline sea foam is due to oils and other organic chemicals in the seawater. Hold on! It's not petroleum or pollution-type oil. Instead, it's more like vegetable oil. Many of the microscopic algae, or phytoplankton, living in the inshore water, produce oil as their food and energy reserve inside their cells. Oil has its benefits. Oil stores lots of chemical energy in a small space, so tiny oil droplets are a great way to package excess energy the algae make when doing photosynthesis. Secondly, tiny oil droplets inside help the algae to float and keep from sinking. Depending on sunlight to make its own energy for survival, algae must be able to stay near the surface. So anything that helps prevent sinking is a beneficial adaptation.

Our coastal water has lots of phytoplankton in it. And with all these tiny algae cells, there are also lots of microscopic animals and zooplankton that eat the algae. Actually, a primary reason our water is green and slightly cloudy, rather than crystal clear, is because we have so much live plankton in it. These tiny, live particles make the water cloudy, but they also create the basis of the marine food chain that so many of our bigger animals depend on.

As the algae manufacture oil, they also leak it. When they die, they leak it. When they are eaten and their consumers die, they also leak it into the water. So this sort of "vegetable" oil is a natural component of sea water, especially in places like ours where the water is rich with these tiny algae.

On windy days, when the ocean is stirred up and the waves are white-capping, the oils get worked toward the surface. If the wind is blowing from offshore toward the beach, this imperceptible film of oils, proteins, and other organic substances get constantly blown onto shore. As the film catches the blowing air, that oily film forms bubbles. And as the wind continues to blow onshore, all those bubbles result in piles of foam that accumulates on the shoreline.

So, on days when the wind is right, you might see sea foam. But remember, it's not due to pollution, but rather is due to our plankton-rich, healthy sea water.

THE WIND ROSE BAR & GRILL

Alright everybody!! Calm down! Yes, The Wind Rose has sold. Yes, there are still daily lunch specials. Yes, they are super affordable. Yes, Tuesday is still Turkey Tuesday and yes, Thursday is still Southern Fried Chicken Day. People rioting in the streets over rumors and random chatter. Listen to the voice of reason! Me!! LOL!!! Believe it or not, I do know what I'm talking about and here is what I know...

Jeff and Jessica Hadley bought The Wind Rose from Calvin. They are Tybee people. I've met them several times and they are super cool! Their son and daughter-in-law, Cameron and Katie, are running the kitchen and they know what they are doing. For the Nell and Mark era folk, just know Nell left her cookbook of notes, so don't panic. Betsey and I hooked up on a dark and stormy chicken day to get the scoop for y'all and here we go.

There are several new items to the menu and they are really good! We started off with the Loaded Fries, which are a beer battered num num, slathered in Havarti cheese, covered in real bacon cuts (not bits, actual bigger pieces of bacon) and can be smothered in ranch, blue cheese, ketchup, or just rammed into your mouth sans dressing. Betsey called it "an Americanized Poutine" and after Googling what the hell that means, I totally agree! Yes, ma'am and may I have another?

After that bowl of happy, we cruised on to Wing Town. These little mommas were rolled in a honey, barbeque, garlic sauceville that, according to local legend, were created and percolated by Jeff himself. Total tongue kicker bite going and an excellent combination of everything. Pair that with 'Nanny's Potato Salad' to cool down your tongue and you can seriously just eat that as breakfast, lunch and din din. The potato salad is a Hadley Family Recipe passed down through generations and please and thank you! May I have some more?

Mom's Salad was quick to follow and it is everything you really want in a salad. Nothing superfluous, just the guts of a good salad. You can fry your chicken or grill it, but either way, you are going to be happy. Throw in any dressing you want on the side and off you go! Whether you are on a diet or just trying to throw something green down your gullet it's a good thing! It is not a shy portion either.

My absolute fave fave was rolled out next!! The Blue Cheese Buffalo Chicken Rolls! Oh, hell yeah! They were four rolls that were some serious MEAT FAT mother happy freaking town!!! I will lie to you all day long, but these, I am not lying!! My sweet baby Jesus of happiness! Give me a minute. I'm calling right now to have Breezy deliver those to my front door!! Slap em in sauce, swallow them whole! Nothing matters any more. My life is complete.

Betsey and I sat down with Cameron after that to talk serious Lunch Specials. You will all be relieved to know everything is pretty much the same. A couple of differences are that Tuesday is just Turkey. No Salisbury. It still comes with two sides and Texas Toast or cornbread. Drinks are included (no alcohol, you lishes) for a meager price of $9.25. Ham is out on Thursday, but white or dark meat and the livers and gizzards are still rocking out the door. The Creamy Cucumber Salad is still a thing as is the Squash Casserole. The weekends are kind of a Chef's Special situation and it depends on what the cook is thinking about. Soups are a thing when it's chilly. Cameron has some awesome foodie ideas coming too that we can all look forward to.

There are also new munchies on the menu and Fish Tacos are a permanent item! There are new salads too, a BLT (bacon is back) is on, as well as some new burgers and platters. There is also a new drink menu with some specialties that will have you happy! New beers are a thing as well, and what could possibly go wrong with that?

The new Rose has new hours too! Open later at night for those who need good food and good times to go with their Bingo moment with Betsey, live music on certain nights and good friends on every night! Oh, and did I mention the Rose now has dessert??? Cameron served this Chocolate Peanut Butter Pie Plate that is soon to be served on an Oreo crust (an Oreo crust, y'all), in which he swabbed that beast in whip cream and cherries and called it a day!! It was glorious. Betsey and I both staggered out of there clutching our sides and to-go boxes with happy faces!

You know where the Wind Rose is. Get to it! Family food with family prices. Gotta go! Breezy is here with my Rolls and nothing else matters.
